1. In the summer of 1950, more than 6,000 individuals belonging to the Bulgarian minority group in Yugoslav Macedonia and the border area of Eastern Serbia, were forced to abandon their property, being allowed to take with them only what could be carried by hand. They were transferred to the Vojvodina, where they were placed in the concentration camp near Zrenjanin (Petrovgrad).
2. This Bulgarian minority group was recently dispatched to the Bulgarian border, in order that they might be returned to Bulgaria. Bulgarian authorities accepted only one half of the group, while the other half was sent back to the camp in the Vojvodina.
